

CITY CONTROLLER

Alexandra Hunt

Alexandra came from working class roots to obtain a Masters Degree in public health management at Temple. She is committed to serving working-class people, advocating for social, racial, and economic justice, and championing systemic change, including the creation of a Philadelphia Public Bank. She is particularly aware, contrary to previous Controllers, that her role on the Boards of the Philadelphia Gas Commission, and the City Board of Pensions, brings her enormous opportunities to foster her broad justice agenda. Bringing that focus to the Controller's Office could be game-changing for our City.